MRS. CARLISLE AT MARKET

She Knows What She Wants and Tradesfolks Like Her.

Cards are out for the Marriage of Well-Known Young People—Many Small Entertainments.

The place of all others to meet the fashionable contingent just at present is at market. I went this morning, the provider of my family being down with a neuralgic headache, and met every one I know in town and a great many other people besides. Of course, they were not all bent on buying joints and vegetables. The beautiful display in the flower markets tempt many who would think it vulgar to go inside of a market without this fragrant reason.

Mrs. Carlisle is a constant visitor, and does all of the family marketing. "She knows a thing or two," said my big fat butcher, as she went by. I confess I came to the same conclusion when I had watched her methods, and I don't believe it is because she is Mrs. Secretary Carlisle that she gets the best of everything, but because she knows exactly what she wants and will take nothing else.

There is a young woman who lives in the West End, and whose private fortune is expressed by seven figures, who, no matter how many panics sweep over the land, will never be a poor woman. She could give Henry Green points on husbanding her pennies.

Of course, the market people don't like her. Trades people never do waste much affection on those individuals to whom a penny looks as large as a dollar, but they allow her, notwithstanding, to go behind their counters, to stick her little leveled fingers into the trays, to pile the peaches and apples to overflowing, with fruit, to let her what she wants and to pay for it her own thirty will.

If you really want to learn how to do your marketing, watch for Mr. Frank Bennett, the very popular person who presides over the affairs of the Arlington Hotel, follow him about from stand to stand and you will learn more in half an hour than you can forget in half a lifetime. Mr. Bennett's methods are not those of the young woman, whose fortune it takes seven figures to write, and yet, I fancy, he makes quite as good bargains.

"Love and Life," the picture that Watts presented to the United States Government, has been made more famous than the contention and execution would warrant by the controversy of which it was the subject, when it was suggested that it should be hung in the White House. I often go to the Corcoran Art Gallery, and I am sure there but I do not see a little knot of people gathered before this special canvas. The comments are some of them ludicrous in the extreme.

"Say, ma," said a venerable hawkeyed at my last visit, "what do you 'spose Miss Cleveland objected to in that picture? I don't see nothing, but your two fingers gotter be fattened up a bit."

National Park Extension.

Lansdowne, Wyo., Nov. 2.—There is a feeling throughout Northern and Central Wyoming against the proposition of Gen. ## MISSPOOK'S SITUATION

She Fled to New York to Join Harry Brandon, the Singer.

ARRESTED AS BEING INSANE

Her Brother-in-Law, G. F. Frothingham, Missed the Charge—Arraigned in the Yorkville Court—But Dismissed From Custody—Her Father and Mother Heartbroken.

The mystery surrounding the prolonged absence from her circle of friends of Miss Evelyn Harriet Pook, daughter of Mr. Brian H. Pook, of New York, has been cleared up. She was taken to a lunatic asylum in Washington, and then to a lunatic asylum in New York, where she was held for two months ago.

It is stated that a young and pretty girl was brought to Yorkville court yesterday afternoon by Court Officer Tucker on a warrant issued by Magistrate Branch, alleging that she was insane and therefore unable to properly care for her property. The court proceedings in the case, conducted by Magistrate Cornell, brought out the singular and romantic story of Miss Pook.

The girl was arraigned under the name of Harriet E. Pook, but it was ascertained that she was the daughter of a retired naval officer in Washington, and that she had been arrested after an extended search, conducted by her brother-in-law, G. F. Frothingham, a local architect of Washington. The girl ran away from home two months ago and took up her residence with her alleged lover, Harry Brandon, a famous singer, who was then in Washington, and was known in musical circles.

Two months ago Miss Pook and Brandon disappeared from Washington. The father of the fugitive girl then charged his son-in-law to follow the couple and institute any legal proceedings necessary to secure their return to the home. Brandon, however, refused to do so, and the girl was traced to the house No. 126 East Sixteenth street in New York, where they were living, according to the lady, as man and wife.

Young Mr. Frothingham, acting under a lawyer's advice, went before Magistrate Branch last Wednesday and obtained a warrant for her arrest. The warrant was issued and Court Officer Tucker was ordered to serve it. The officer watched the girl all night, but the couple for whom he was looking did not appear, and from thenceforward his inquiries directed him up a constant espionage on the house. Yesterday afternoon Officer Tucker was in the house and the girl had returned, and he was serving the warrant.

Shortly before 5 p. m. Miss Pook was arraigned before Magistrate Cornell. The affidavit alleging her insanity was sworn to by her brother-in-law, G. F. Frothingham, of 151 East Fifty-first street, who stated that he had known the woman only since last Monday. In the affidavit it was alleged that she had been under the hallucination that she had been sent to save a certain young man from suicide by keeping him off the street and supporting him; the young man being Brandon.

When Miss Pook was questioned by the magistrate, she said:

"It is no sin to help a human being. It is no shame to live in the same house together. Myself and friend occupy separate rooms. I love him and he intends to marry me."

"What evidence have you that this woman is insane?" asked Magistrate Cornell.

"Nothing, your honor," replied Dr. Bogart, who appeared as complainant.

"Where is her brother, whose name appears in this warrant?" asked the magistrate.

"I do not know," replied Bogart.

"Then I will discharge this woman," said the magistrate, indignantly, adding: "She is perfectly sane and there is not the slightest evidence produced to back up the warrant."

Miss Pook volunteered the information that the name, Pook, was the maiden name of her mother. She stated that she was thirty-two years old. She looked much younger, however.

Mr. Frothingham returned to Washington this morning.

When seen at the residence of his father-in-law, Mr. Samuel H. Pook, he stated to a Times reporter that he was both disappointed and disgusted with the hearing of his sister-in-law's case before Magistrate Cornell, in Yorkville police court, yesterday morning.

The case was not fairly dealt with," said Mr. Frothingham. "In the first place I was not aware of the fact that it was to be held in Yorkville court."

Harry Brandon's Career.

Harry Brandon, who lives at No. 150 A street northeast, is a music teacher, and a few years ago, was quite popular as the "boy soprano," and sang at a choir rehearsal at Grace Church, Georgetown, where he had gone to assist Miss De Sholes, the organist. Their intimacy of taste drew them together in the embrace of friendship. He next met her at the home of her father, Mr. Brian H. Pook, of New York, where he was then singing.
